

THE DAY OF MOVING WONDERS

On a windy afternoon, Milo and Zara were folding some paper to make paper planes in their front yard.

“Look at the papers, Zara!” Milo asked as the wind swirled the papers.

“Woah! The wind gave them a nudge!” Zara responded with amusement in her voice.

Lily was walking around with her toy cart when she noticed Milo and Zara.

“That’s motion! The wind made the papers move,” Lily said proudly.

Milo and Zara looked at her with puzzled expressions.

Lily took her toy top and started spinning it. Milo and Zara huddled closer to see.

“See that? It’s spinning. That’s motion too!” Lily explained.

“A spinning motion!” Zara said.

Lily grabbed her ball from her toy cart and rolled it across the grass. “Watch this!” she said. “That’s rolling motion.”

“Yesterday, I played on a swing that was moving back and forth because my dad pushed it!” Lily added.

“So, motion is the movement of objects, whether they roll, spin, swing, or move through the air,”

Zara sum up.

“Rolling, spinning, flying, running, swinging...” Milo whispered, “I discovered so much about motion!”

“The world is full of wonderful things to discover,” Zara finished.
